Introduction

The Grand Majestic Hotel stands as a beacon of opulence in downtown Chicago, its grand ballroom glittering with crystal chandeliers and the city's elite mingling in their finest attire. It's New Year's Eve, and the hotel's owner, Charles Whitmore, has spared no expense for the lavish gala. But as the clock ticks toward midnight, a snowstorm rages outside, trapping everyone inside. Amidst the celebration, Charles is found dead in his private office, the victim of a brutal murder. With no way in or out, the killer must be among the guests. As the festivities turn to fear, a group of strangers must unravel the truth before the police arrive—and before the killer strikes again. Welcome to a night of mystery and deception, where everyone has a secret and no one is above suspicion.

CHAPTER TWO

Background

Charles Whitmore, the 58-year-old owner and CEO of the Grand Majestic Hotel, was a powerful figure in Chicago's hospitality industry. Known for his ruthless business tactics and extravagant lifestyle, he had many enemies. On this New Year's Eve, he planned to announce a major development for the hotel, but his plans were cut short. The gala was in full swing when he retreated to his top-floor office. Hours later, his body was discovered by his son, James, after the New Year's countdown. The snowstorm has isolated the hotel, and the police are delayed. Now, the guests must take on the role of investigators to uncover the truth.

CHAPTER THREE

The Setting

The Grand Majestic Hotel is a five-star establishment in downtown Chicago, renowned for its opulent ballroom, exclusive penthouse suites, and high-profile clientele. The hotel is a labyrinth of grand corridors, luxurious rooms, and hidden corners. The top-floor office, where Charles was found, is a private sanctuary with a large mahogany desk, a marble paperweight, and a breathtaking view of the snow-covered city. The ballroom, with its crystal chandeliers and live orchestra, is the heart of the New Year's Eve gala, now tainted by the shadow of murder. The storm outside has turned the hotel into a gilded cage, and the killer is still among the guests.

CHAPTER FOUR

The Incident

During the New Year's Eve gala, Charles Whitmore was found dead in his private office on the top floor. He had been struck on the back of the head with a heavy marble paperweight. The office door was locked from the outside, and his wallet and watch were missing, suggesting a robbery. However, the circumstances point to someone within the hotel. The snowstorm has trapped everyone inside, and the police are unable to reach the hotel. The guests must now work together to identify the killer before the authorities arrive.

CHAPTER FIVE

The Discovery

At 12:30 AM, James Whitmore, Charles's son, went to check on his father after he failed to appear for the New Year's countdown. He found the office door locked and had to retrieve a master key from the front desk. Upon entering, he discovered his father's body slumped over the desk, a pool of blood congealing on the floor. The marble paperweight, stained with blood, lay nearby. James alerted the guests, and panic ensued. The hotel was sealed off, and no one was allowed to leave.

CHAPTER SIX

The Investigation Begins

As the initial shock subsides, the guests realize that the killer is still among them. The storm shows no signs of letting up, and the police are hours away. With no other option, they must take matters into their own hands. The hotel manager, Vivian Cross, suggests that everyone gather in the ballroom to account for their whereabouts. But tensions are high, and accusations fly. It's up to you to sift through the lies and uncover the truth. The investigation begins now—trust no one.

CHAPTER SEVEN

Developments

- A guest reveals they saw Vivian coming from the elevator around 11:15 PM, not the restroom, contradicting her alibi.
- Charles's missing wallet and watch are found in Vivian's office safe, along with financial documents revealing large unexplained deposits.
- Vivian attempts to frame James by planting his gambling debts in Charles's office, but the evidence appears to be planted.
- The whiskey bottle found in the office has only Charles's and Vivian's fingerprints, despite her claim that she was never there.
- A power outage plunges the hotel into darkness, and when the lights return, a crucial piece of evidence has been moved.
- One of the guests is found unconscious, having been attacked while snooping in the office.

YOUR CHALLENGE

The Final Puzzle

The storm has passed, and the police are on their way. You have one last chance to confront the suspects and reveal the killer. Review the evidence, question the alibis, and piece together the truth. Who had the motive, the means, and the opportunity? The answer lies in the details. When you're ready, present your solution. But be careful—the killer is still among you, and they won't go down without a fight.
